SAFETY MEASURES IN RESPONSE TO NOVEL CORONAVIRUS

Emerging domestic natural gas and helium producer Reenergen wishes to inform investors of the steps being taken to protect staff and limit interruptions to the development of the Virginia Gas Project.

On Sunday the 15th of March 2020, President Cyril Ramaphosa declared the COVID 19 outbreak in South Africa a national disaster, allowing the government to begin taking measures in countering the virus at an early stage whilst confirmed cases are still only at 62 as of the 17th of March 2020.

The Company is taking swift and decisive measures to limit the impact of the virus to staff, which include:

- From the 18th of March, all staff in the Johannesburg office will be working from home in self isolation;
- IT systems have been prepared and tested to ensure continuity of communication and seamless interaction between staff members;
- Staff at the operations are now observing measures to limit possible contact with other staff members;
- Significant emphasis on personal hygiene with no physical contact allowed where practical;
- No public transport is permitted;
- No meetings in person, all meetings are now over internet; and
- All non-essential staff at the plant have been placed on special leave.

At present, the impact of the virus has not yet resulted in any substantial delays to either the fabrication of the liquefaction equipment, nor to the construction of the pipeline. We will continue to monitor this and update investors as the situation develops.

The Company extends its heartfelt sympathy to all those who have lost loved ones to this virus, and wishes everyone well in these challenging times ahead.
